Robert Berg and David Hughes, a.k.a. Bachelors Anonymous, have composed music together for the past four years. In 1984 they began a theatrical collaboration with John Fleck which included the soundtrack for In A Viennese Vein, a Gothic tale of lust and depravity which co-starred Lance Loud, and I Got The He-Be-She-Be's, directed by David Schweizer and recipient of the 1986 L.A. Weekly award for "Outstanding Performance in a One-Character Show." Other theater credits include the UCLA Theater Arts production of Megan Terry's Home and Zack & Friends' Exercise In Revolution. Motion picture work has included sound design for the film Under The Gun starring Vanessa Williams and Sam Jones, and corporate educational films. As Bachelors Anonymous, they perform their original material at venues ranging from poolside at a West Hollywood health club to large concert halls. They are currently working on their second album, Looking For You, with video co-written by performance artist Tim Bennett and directed by Adam Soch.
